Jonathan Brind trades as Shepherd Videos. His showreel can be found at <http://www.brind.tv/shepherd/videos.html>
He took a National Council for Trainee Journalists based apprenticeship at the Waltham Forest Guardian and the University of Central Lancashire (block release) in the mid 1970s and has worked in newspaper and magazine publishing ever since. His first editorship was a coal industry magazine (between 1983 and 1996, including the coal strike year). While editing a windows magazine (Glass & Glazing Products) between 1998 and autumn 2007, he launched two spin off titles both of which were profitable from the first issue. He is currently a freelance working for various public relations agencies, compiling crosswords and making videos.

General

He is familiar with several software packages including FoxPro (a sophisticated database language), Final Cut Pro & Quark. For a year he taught shorthand classes twice a week to a group of younger journalists at Unity Media.

He runs three miles about twice a week, regularly swims a mile and is a non-smoker. He has a full clean driving licence and a small, environmentally sensitive car.

 Dogs Gone	One of his videos about the last days of The Stow, Walthamstow Dog Stadium, was shown at the East End Film Festival in April 2009. A DVD of this video is being sold by three local retailers and on his web site.	His video OrganicLea at Hawkwood was broadcast by the Community Chennel (part of the Sky system) in May and then July 2010.
---	---	---	--

Several of his videos can be seen on YouTube including one that has been viewed more than 11,000 times and he has been invited to join Youtube's revenue sharing scheme.

	In 2009 he made a video about the attempt to re-enact the first British powered flight (on Walthamstow Marshes) and he has been given a small grant by Apex Arts to make a video about a choir in a tough part of north east London.
