Jonathan Brind trades as Shepherd Videos. His showreel can be found at <http://www.baa.me.uk/> He is an experienced cameraman (with his own Z1) and editor using Final Cut Pro. He works with Tony Coll (see <http://tonycoll.posterous.com/>) running media training courses and making corporate videos.

General

He trained as a journalist and continues to work in public relations. He runs three miles about twice a week, regularly swims a mile and is a non-smoker. He has a full clean driving licence and a small, environmentally sensitive car.

In the last few months (October 2010-June 2011) he has shot and edited videos of several conferences including two for the CEPR, two for VRL (a business information publisher) and one about the launch of a new international charity for alumni called MARDI.

One of his videos about the last days of The Stow, Walthamstow Dog Stadium (see trailer at <http://youtube/ajEd8RuXHqU>), was shown at the East End Film Festival in 2011. Renderyard is selling this video online and offering it to various tv channels including Samsung smart tv.

His video OrganicLea at Hawkwood (<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DjOuP9g9s5g>) was broadcast by the Community Channel (part of the Sky network) in May, July and October 2010.

Several of his videos can be seen on YouTube including one that has been viewed more than 27,000 times (Singing Ringing Tree at <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LxKWcAPOHU0>) and he has been invited to join Youtube's revenue sharing scheme.

He made a video about the attempt to re-enact the first British powered flight (on Walthamstow Marshes)

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VUatPVJGwK4> and was given a small grant by Apex Arts to make a video about a choir in a tough part of north east London, <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nrNgFKTaSg>

He runs a campaigning web site at <http://www.learmarsh.com/> and has personal web sites at <http://www.brind.tv> & <http://www.brind.co.uk>.
